"I SHOULD WORRY."

You won't, if you follow the lead of the Rev. Dr. Rose.

Only to-day is ours. Yesterday has passed into history; tomorrow has not come; it never may. It was the Master who said in that most comforting sixth chapter of St. Matthew: "Take, therefore, no heed for the morrow; for the morrow shall take thought for the things of itself. Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof."

Following is an epitome of a notable sermon delivered on a recent Sunday, by the Rev. Henry R. Rose, in the Church of the Redeemer, Newark, N. J., of which he is the pastor. Counseling against the folly of worry, he said:

"One of the days I never worry about is yesterday, simply because I cannot change it if I would. I did the best I knew how yesterday, but even if I hadn't, what is the use of crying over spilt milk? Yesterday was mine; it is now God's."

"Another day I do not worry about is to-morrow. It is bound to come, and if I dread it, I am simply weakening myself when it arrives. The best plan is to prepare yourself for the future by improving the present, and then when it comes you will be ready for it, and it will be eager for you. Doors of opportunity are bound to open for prepared men and women."

"If I do not worry about yesterday or to-morrow, why should I worry about to-day? Why worry at all? Make it your practice to live one day at a time and see how finely it works out."

"Any man can say 'no' to temptation for just one day. Any man can fight his battle to-day. Any man can bear his burden for a day. If he does that, he will find himself able to do it every day and be the winner in the end. If we try to live two or three days at a time, one of them will upset us."

"Look backward for inspiration; look forward for progress; look around you for material for stepping-stones to higher things and never despair. A man's house should be on the hill-top of cheerfulness and serenity, so high that no shadows rest upon it, and where the morning comes so early and the evening taries so late that he may have twice as many golden hours as those of other men. He is to be pitied whose house is in the valley of grief between the hills, with the longest nights and the shortest days."

Read the above carefully and carry it with you. When you feel blue, or get a 'grouch' on, read it over. If you run across a man that has himself so centered that he thinks only of his own troubles and believes the whole world is against him, let him read this. You'll make him feel differently, and perform a kindly act.
